THE BRAVEST DEED I EVER

SAW. A Plain Tale From the Hills. 'I have already told the story,' said

'A good story bears repetition,' said we.

I told it years ago in the pages of my old schoolpaper, Grenfrier. 'There are other boys in the world than Carthusians,' we argued. Well, it's just a plain tale from the hills,' he said, growing reminiscent; and then slowly came the story of the Banerwal. of the Tongi Pass.

'It was in '97, and Sir Bindon Blood was going for the Bunerwals. These people had learned a sort of contempt for all enemics because of the splendid bounty of Nature in fitting them up with fortresses in the shape of mountainous ranges almost ... impassable. From India into Buner, there are only three ways. Sir Bindon Blood made simultaneous feints at all three of them, with his real attack-and a hard knocking attack it was -at the Tungi Pass.

* The evening I arrived the hills crackled merrily with their bivouse fires and our oars were teased through the night by the whistle of their bullets. But we slept through it comfortably enough, and in the early morning moved off to the Pass, a mile away. Our path lay along a deep valley with a steep ridge of about 2,000ft. on either side; the road was just a mountain footpath, very steep and rough, and it led over the ridge hold by the enemy. On that ridge fluttered 39 standards of the Bunerwals, and all about it were stone breastworks occupied by their riflemen, while the swordsmen, nursing cold steel for us, wait-ed out of range behind the ridge.

Then the guns of our Artillery began to speak, and for two hours shells screamed and splashed against the "sangura" of the Bunerwals. We knocked them all to pieces, those breast-works, but the plucky Bunerwals, waiting till each shell had burst, popped up from behind the shattered breast-works and began building them anew. Cool, well-plucked fellows, I can

'After a while our Infantry swarmed up the mountain side to the attack, and the Bunerwals retorted with musketry fire and also with huge boulders, which they sent crashing down from the ridge into the middle of our men. But they had to expose themselves for this sort of business, and as our shells ploughed into them with frightful accuracy they had to withdraw be-hind the ridge. The standards were kept flying to make the silly little white men think the Bunerwals were still there, but in reality they were beating a hasty retreat.

It was while our Artillery was hammering at the "sungers" that I noticed three Bunerwals, armed only with swords, standing proudly in a "sungur." Their reply to the pounding of our guns was the shaking of glittering swordblades in the air, as though to encourage their fellows. At last a shell smashed the "sungur" to splinters, and we thought our three Bunerwals had gone with it. But out of Hongkong High Level Tramway Co., Ltd. the writhing smake leapt the three 1267 gallant fellows, and dashed straight down the mountain side as though to charge our climbing Infantry. As they came, however, one man swerved aside, and getting in a side path, disappeared abruptly over the ridge. At his heels, quick as a flash of lightning, followed the second man.

The third came on. He came on nobly. A glorious bronzed black-bearded creature of the mountainsleaping lightly and gracefully down his dan-grous path, his loose flowing robes fluttering in the wind, his curved sword-blade glittering in the sunlight as he flashed it over his bead.

One man against an Army! Through my glasses I saw the dust kicking up at his feet as the bullets struck at his path. All about him they rained, but he never checked for an instant.

Suddenly he went down, but he was up again in a minute, bandaging a wounded thigh with a bit of puggaree wrenched off instantly for that purpose; and then, on again, as though he had only stopped to tie up a shoe lace.

As he came on he kicked off his sandals -whether to give him surer footbold, or because he was setting out deliberately towalk upon holy ground, the ground or by Public Auction Sale, to be held death, I do not know, but no man ever on Monday, the 10th day of August, moved so deliberately, so gloriously to his 1903, at 3 p.m., at the Offices of the death. To kill one infidel-just one— Public Works Department, by Order before he passed into Paradise was this of His Excellency the Governor; of Two noble creature's consuming ambition, and

One longed to stop that hall of bullats, and when the single mountain warrior, matching his sword against a victorious army, pitched heavily upon his face, rolled over a couple of times, and then lay horribly still-one was sorry. Lator, when I reached the spot, I was ghad to see that one of our men had taken tho warrior's waistcloth and laid it reverently over the calm and solemn face of the bearded Bunerwal. 'It was a little, but a significant tribute to valour. Real valour, ch?'—By Major-

BISHOP POTTER AND THE REV. R. C. FILLINGHAM.

Interchange of Christian Courtesles.

The Rev. R. C. Fillingham, while staying at New York en route to England, has been denouncing with his accustomed vigour the Ritualism he found prevalent in that city. Among other things he protested in a letter to Bishop Potter regarding the nature of the services at a certain church. Bishop Potter seems to have been drawn at once, and wrote the following polite epistle: -

· Reverend Sir, -You call yourself clergyman of the Church of England, but 1 doubt it, for a clergyman is usually a gentleman, and aware that he may not print a private letter until its receipt has been acknowledged by the person to whom it is MEETING of the SHAREHOLDERS i addressed. That you are a lunatic is much more likely, for only a lunatic could suppose that the Church of New York is governed by the laws of the Church of England, or that you could compel me, or any incumbent in the diocese of New York, to enforce or to obey the laws of the Church of Eng-

for a detail of police, and have instructed him, in case you and your followers venture in any way to interrupt or interfere with his services, to direct the police to throw you and your associates into the street. Happily, we have a law in the State of New York which deals summarily and offectually with disturbers of public worship."

Mr Fillingham replied as follows:-· Reverend Sir, - I am in receipt of your extremely violent and insulting letter of yesterday's date. I suppose so extraordinary a production was never before penned by a professedly Christian minister.

. You are, or affect to be, unaware that open letters are frequently written to public men. You are also unaware, apparently, that the church of which you are an officer has declared that she has no intention of differing in anything from the dectrine, discipline, and worship of the Church of England. Lauppose you are also unaware of the fact that the ritual of St. Mary the Virgin does differ absolutely from that discipline and worship. I will not follow you in your own i choice expressions and describe them as 'lunacy,' but it is certainly a singular exhibition of ignorance.

'I note that you condone and are privy to the illegalities and idolatry practiced by HONGKONG, CANTON AND MACAO the rector of St. Mary the Virgin. I also note your threat of physical violence—that you, a minister of the Gospel, advise another minister to throw us into the street; but I can assure you that no threat will affect those who are prepared not only

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

On Monday next, the THE NEW Legislative Council will WATER BILL, take up the second reading of the new Water defies Bill, which is put forward by the Government to replace the Ordinance passed last year. The Bill is the outcome of correspondence with the Colonial Office, its substitution is ordered by the Colonial-Office, and acting upon instructions from London the official nembers of the Legislative Council will pass the Bill, whatever the opinions of unofficials inside or out side the Council. The outside publie, therefore, however much they may be affected by the Bill, are utterly helpless in the matter. Al they have to do is to bend their necks to the yoke and to submit. Little or no advantage can be gained from a dis cussion of the merits or demerits of the measure; but a reference to the weathereock nature of the legislation may not be without interest. The new legislation is the result of the water famines of recent years. Not only has the city of Victoria outgrown the water supply, but there is good reason for he? lieving that the shortage is accelerated paid their money to obtain the rights in successive years by the seandalous thus assured to their vendors-rights sewaste in Chinese houses. His Lordship said-In this case, the Attorney General, the Respondent, appears in person in support of his motion, and no one appears for the Appellant, who, yesterday, gave notice that he withdrew his appeal. By section 16 of the New Terri tories Land Court Ordinance, No. 18 of 1900, a claimant dissatisfied with a decision of the Court, where the value of the claim is over $5,000, may, within 14 days from the date of such decision, apply to the Chief Justice for leave to appeal to the Full Court. In this case, notice of motion headed Chiu Heck Lam, appellant, and the Attorney General, respondent, was given and pled on 7th August, 1901 (the last

KC., for such leave to appeal from the Land Court's decision. The notice should be moved, but, be that as it may, the would have been better filed sooner, as when not filed till the last day it is possible the Obief Justice, may be occupied in other cases. It must be borne in mind that the actual motion must be made within the fourteen days, and it is not enough that a motion paper be filed within that time. However, in this case the motion was made or mentioned in Court on 7th August, 1901, and was adjourned sine die by the then Acting Chief Justice. Considering that the Legislature had fixed a limit of fourteen days for moving, I do not, for one moment, suppose that the learned judge in adjourning the hearing of the motion sine die intended, or that the appellant thought he intended, that the motion low-priced, are being produced for the might be brought on again a year or two later. It was, in the circumstances, the duty of the applicant and his solicitor to apply within a reasonable time for the fine as ever in the past, according to Mr Court to fix a day for the further hearing. With an appeal hanging over the decision of the Land Court, the title of the land must remain in an unsatisfactory state, and this the appellant must have known fullwell. Nothing having been done for nearly two years to again bring on the motion for leave to appeal, the Crown Solicitor wrote to the appellant on 26th June, 1903, saying : 'As the Government desires that the title to the land may be cleared up, I am directed to give you notice that unless you either proceed with the appeal or abandon it within one month from date, application will be made to the Court to strike out the appeal.' This was perfectly reasonable, but, instead of abandoning the appeal, the appellant insisted till 25th July, the day before the month tion in leaf or powdered gold or other had expired, and then, through his solicitor, writes asking for two months further ime. Naturally, the Crown Solicitor, introduced, and the final surface may be acting for the Attorney General, the respondent mentioned in the appellant's original motion paper, declines, and adds: before the Court as soon an possible." Accordingly, on 1st August, 1903, the Crown Solicitor, having obtained leave to serve notice of motion for to-day (8th August) filed and served his notice of until quite dry, it is a strong irritant to motion that the Court would be moved that the application for leave to appeal filed on 7th August, 1901, might be dismissed which is extremely annoying, though not for want of prosecution. CORRESPONDENCE

WATER DISTRIBUTION. To the Editor of the 'CHINA MAIL.'

Hongkong, Aug. 8, 1903. Sir, -I read with pleasure your remarks upon '100 to I' in a recent issue of your calamities from which the Far East has paper, but was sorry that any necessity had suffered during the last fifty year's. arisen to cause them to be written. The able and learned author of the phrase either did not do himself justice when he used it. or he failed to make his menning elear. As an old British resident of Hongkong, I have seen most of the attempts made by Governors and Administrations to give way or pander to the prejudices of the Chinese. Curiously enough, I never could quite fathem the motives which white Governor can have to seek to play into the hands of a subject race, at the expense of the interests of his own nationals. When ever it has been attempted. Thursday, July 29, in the presence has followed. Wherever the late Governor surely as the night the day. The Benguet road work, and others. mistake is, as you have already stated, partly one of arithmetic; it is also one of classification. In a British Colony, the British community, headed by the Executive, from the Governing Race, assisted, perhaps by a number of non British (even Chinese) citizens, who, by education or birth or otherwise, have become fitted for that position. That is the case in this Colony, and the close proximity Island to the mainland China makes the necessity all the greater that the Governing Race should retain a firm hold of the reins. The mass of Chinese who form the 100 to I, are simply about a quarter of a million people who come here to trade, and work and be governed, by the pure and hones laws of Great Britain. In spite of Gov ernor Hennessy's feeble attempt to mak them all Britishers, they still remain what I have stated them to be. But you will ask what has this to do with the distribution of water? Well, most the Europeans in Hongkong are in full sympathy with the remarks made in Council by General Gascoigne in reference to the water supply. It was a great mistake put the water pipes into Chinese houses, and running like a mill-race at a rate of about our water troubles date from that first blunder. 'The careless waste of water Chineso has been shown repeatedly, and well known by all house agents and householders. If the ordinary Chinaman would use the water for purposes of cleanliness and sanitation, and prevent it from running to waste, it would not be so bad; but he does not use it; he wastes it. And who pays for it? So far as I am aware, no check is kept upon the water-taps in Chinese houses, so that the rule which governs Europeans-so many gallons by metering for so much rental-does not touch the Chinese. Some of the better-class Chinese of course, living in foreign-built houses, pay European rates. and the additional sum for rent of meter. But the ordinary Chinaman pays none of these things-he merely does the wasting of the water. It may be alleged that the new 'rider main 'scheme will put a check upon waste, but this may he allowed to remain an open question. Intermittent systems often provoke waste, as taps are left open frequently to catch the water. and buckets and bath-tubs not infrequently everflow. And we do not quite know who pays for this 'rider main' system. I once heard the Chinose were to do so. It has never been my desire to do any thing that is not just and fair to the large. hard-working Chinese community here, but the Executive here undertook a herculean task when they began to put taps in Chinese houses. As Mr Chadwick said the whole of Hongkong Island would need be turned into a vast reservoir before the supply would be equal to the demand (or the waste). - Yours.

A tant rope leads parallel to, and about three feet above, the planking by which those making the passage balance themselves. At the time the cattle buyer and the veterinary crossed this rude structure the stream had risen above its ordinary level-two feet beneath the planking-until it had submerged the same with several inches of A half hour later the two men, having completed their business in Twin Peaks. were returning to the cattle range. Upon arrival at the stream they were surprised to find that it had risen until the swift current nearly touched the balancing rope. It was thirty miles an hour. Jenkins demurred. Having had previous experience with mountain streams during freshets he hesitated to trust himself to maintain i footing on the plank against so great a volume of water and force of current. White was, however, determined to make the passage, and Jack McCauley volunteered to cross with him. Having taken hold of the rope, the two, White in advance, found a footing on the first plank. As they advanced towards midstream the water bolled and frothed about their hips.

Suddenly White uttered an exclamation. Jenkins saw him disappear with the exception of his two hands which still firmly grasped the rope which strained and threatened to break under the tension. White had missed his footing on the planking and had gone down the up-current nide of it. He held firmly to the rope and despite the force of the current managed to bring his head above water. But it was only a temporary respite from death for the planking caught his body in the small of the back the force of the current nearly doubling it. White know that resisted McCauley's heroic efforts to rave 'I'm done for, Jack, save yourself,' he cried out several times. Nevertheless McCauley braced himself as best he could and in imminent danger of losing his own footing on the plank, endeavored to match his strength against that of the current and save the life of his comrade It was a hopsless effort, however, and notwithstanding the encouraging shouts of Jenkins and the others on the bank, McCauley's strength soon failed him and he was forced to release his hold on White's three men had succumbed to the privations collar. The latter's blued and strained fingers loosened from the rope and with a despairing look and a murmured goodby. the brave American disappeared, and a minute later the on-lookers caught a glimpse of his body as it was whirled down McCauley managed to gradually make his way back to the shore and silently rejoined his companions. They made their way back to Twin Peaks where the news of the tragic death, combined with the incessant downpour of rain, to make things gloomy For two days Mr Jenkins remained in Twin Peaks before it was possible to effect the crossing of the stream. During this time the rain fell continually and the sun never by all chemists and medicine vendors;
